

Visit of the International President in France

Report

In August 2015, Tim Boyd, International President, visited France during his tour in Europe to have a break. He was accompanied by his wife Lily and daughter Angelique Boyd. Due to the summer holidays, programme with the President consisted of a visit to Giverny, the garden and house of Claude Monet, famous impressionist.

The visit was an occasion for some dozen volunteer workers of the Theosophical Society in France to meet the International President. After the visit in the garden, everybody took part in a picnic. Volunteer workers had many questions to ask so right after the picnic an interesting questions and answer session took place.

These days in France were a rest for the President but also a good way to strengthen the ties between the President and the workers.
